USE BACK YARDS FOR PLAYGROUNDS

Dr. Myron T. Scudder Suggests Plan to Solve Play Difficulty in Congested Districts.

A new method of solving the question of room for the city child to play in, has been advanced by Dr. Myron T. Scudder, now at the University of Virginia, and a director of the Playground and Recreation Association of America. He is a brother of S. D. Scudder, vice-president of the Rich-mond Trust and Savings Company. Dr. Scudder's plan is to establish a blg community backyard in each block of dwellings in big cities, the yard to be equipped for play and under the care of a supervisor, who will be paid either by parents in each block or by the city. The plan is elaborately presented in the New York Times for July

The playground is sweeping over the country at a great rate, according to Dr. Scudder, and city authorities are beginning to realize that play spaces are a necessary part of every city. But in the larger cities and especially in congested districts like Manhattan Island, New York, the value of land is almost prohibitive. An area of an acre, which was recently condemned, cost the city nearly a million.

That is where the community backyard comes in. In the better residence yard comes in. In the better residence sections, these yards occupy half to one-third of the lot, and are idle most of the time. Several of them could easily be combined into an excellent playground for the children of one block. Dr. Scudder admits that this idea would not apply to the tenement districts, where there are no yards. He suggests that in these districts a street be set aside at cetrain times for the children to play in, under the direc-tion of a competent supervisor.

A survey of Richmond backyards revealed the fact that out of 450 examfined, 168 were dirty, eighty-five were reported as filthy, 216 had some rub-bish scattered about, while fifty-four contined stagnant water. The survey showed further that the practice of throwing rubbish on the streets is almost universal in Richmond.

A great deal of uncleanliness is also caused by the failure of people to pro-vide proper receptacles for rubbish, all sorts of boxes, barrels and cans being used for this purpose, while in some instances no receptable at all is provided. Still more objectionable is the practice of mixing ashes and garbage, so that both are carried to the dumps together, where the garbage putrifies and breeds rats, flies and other vermin. The report especially censures the extensive practice of throwing trade waste, often of a perishable kind, into the streets and alleys.
